Ag insurance processing center to locate here

Coon Rapids will be the site of a new regional processing center in support of AgriLogic Insurance Services (ALIS), a company which delivers all federally-subsidized and private crop insurance programs to producers nationwide.

The announcement is the result of a new partnership between ALIS and Coon Rapids Insurance Agency. According to CRIA owner Wilts Cretsinger, the new regional processing center could employ between 20-30 within the next one to two years.

Joe Davis, President of AgriLogic Insurance Services, visited Coon Rapids for the second time last Thursday to iron out details of the new partnership. Davis first visited Coon Rapids in February at Cretsinger's invitation.

"This could evolve into more than a processing center," said Cretsinger. "It could be a full service branch including claims, a location for training agents, underwriters and mapping."

ALIS is the crop insurance division of Occidental Fire and Casualty Insurance Company. Occidental is A- (Excellent) rated from the A.M. Best Company and is known for its financial strength and commitment to the crop insurance industry.

In the past year, ALIS is recognizing significant growth in the federal crop insurance industry, which has been in turmoil as the federal government attempts to bring down government spending. According to its company newsletter AgriLogic Agent, ALIS became an official Approved Insurance Provider (AIP) in February 2010 and filed crop hail products with the state departments of insurance in 12 states including Iowa for the 2010 crop year. The company is in the process of extending its coverage to 12 other states for the 2011 crop year.

In December 2010, ALIS teamed up with an crop insurance agency in Camp Point, IL (pop. 1200) and started its first regional service center. They are also initiating a regional service center in Milford, NE, pop 2070, located about 35 miles southwest of Lincoln, NE.

Cretsinger noted that ALIS's strategy of having its regional processing centers in rural communities is not only economically beneficial but also well suited because rural America is the area that drives American agriculture.

"Joe Davis recognizes that small towns offer low overhead and a great work ethic," said Cretsinger. "At the same time, it brings the industry that much closer to the grower and the small town agent."

Cretsinger says Coon Rapids Insurance Agency will remain an agent (or retailer) and will deal directly with the farmer. For its part, ALIS will deal with agents throughout the midwest and earn their books of business through superior agent support, policy underwriting and training. A key component to the strategy is a well trained team to assist agents in providing farmers with the best possible products and service. The process of developing that team is currently underway.

Cretsinger said having a regional processing center close to home will be a advantage to area growers and to their agents.

"The crop insurance business has always been built on the relationship between the farmer and the agent," continued Cretsinger. "It's equally important that the agent has a friendly user relationship with the company."

ALIS will begin its presence in Coon Rapids on June 1. By the end of the year, there should be 4-6 processors and underwriters hired. "As the future unfolds, we hope the branch will support as many as 20 to 30 employees."

Estate scholarship helping CRB grads

By Alyssa Elliott

When Anna Stephenson passed away in 1998, it came as a surprise to many who knew her she left her entire estate to a scholarship fund for CRB students. A total of almost $140,000 was left in the care of trustee Iowa Savings Bank.

"This is very unusual. Every once in a while someone will leave a little bit as scholarship funds, but she gave her entire estate," said attorney Mark Thomas, who administered her will.

The money was to be given as grants and loans to "worthy, intelligent, industrious and needy students." All monies are to be used by the year 2048, 50 years following Anna's death.

So who was Anna Stephenson?

"I grew up right across the street from her," Larry Schwenk said. "As a kid, my mom and dad always had me mow her yard and scoop her walk for free."

He remembers having milk and cookies at her house as a treat.

"She was just a really nice, quiet lady," he said.

Anna lived very modestly, he recalled.

"I'm really surprised that she left her estate to scholarships, because she didn't have any kids and, as far as I know, she didn't work at the school. It was an awfully nice gesture on her part," he said.

Harold and Maxine Smouse lived next door to Anna on 6th Avenue.

"She lived in that house long after her husband died," Maxine recalled. Anna's husband was Henry.

The Smouses recall Anna as a good neighbor.

"We used to have block parties. Back then neighbors 'neighbored' a lot more than they do now," Maxine said. "Ann always enjoyed that. She wouldn't miss it."

Phyllis Richardson remembered Anna as a person who liked to dance and listen to music.

"She worked a lot in her garden, too," Richardson, who lived across the alley behind Anna's house, said. Richardson moved to the neighborhood in 1982. "Ann was pretty normal. She used to go to dances even at the age of 70. She would just have a great time."

Richardson would often pick up Anna and take her shopping, because Anna didn't drive.

"I knew her when she was retired," she said.

Although Richardson couldn't quite put a finger on what job Anna had retired from. She did recall that Anna spoke of times when she ran a home daycare. Richardson noted Ana did have one child.

"She had a child, but it died at birth. She showed me a picture that she had," Richardson said. "She was very loving of other children. She liked children."

Richardson posed this as Anna's motivation to set up a scholarship fund.

"She had no living children and no close relations. There was nobody else. I always thought she was kind of lonely," Richardson said.

Anna liked youth and supported youth.

"She left all her money to kids. That was good," Richardson said.

This year some $7,000 was given in scholarship funds to CRB graduates in Anna Stephenson's name.

POET donates grill to CRB sophomore class

Thanks to POET Biorefining, the Coon Rapids-Bayard outdoor concession stand now has a permanent BBQ grill and next year's Junior-Senior prom will surely be one of the best ever.

Recently the CRB sophomore class held a meeting with their parents to discuss efforts to raise money for next year's prom. It was duly noted that the concession stand, which the class operates during Crusader baseball games, was in need of a grill. Jeff Andersen, whose daughter, Chelsea, is in the class, was at the meeting and thought he could help.

"In the past, one of the parents would just bring a grill," said Andersen. "But I talked to my boss, Owen Shunkwiler and asked if POET could buy and donate a new grill for these sophomores and anyone else who worked the concession stand."

Shunkwiler, general manager for the Coon Rapids ethanol plant, was more than happy to oblige. The money raised by the juniors will be used to fund next year's prom as well as 2013 graduation expenses.

ARNOLD "NICK" ANDERSEN

Arnold Simon "Nick" Andersen, son of Hans Simon and Grace (Peterson) Andersen, was born April 5, 1923, in Guthrie County, Iowa. In 1928, his proud Danish immigrant family moved to the home farm east of Viola Center, where Nick grew up. He attended country school #9 and graduated from Viola Center in 1941. Nick continued to farm with his parent and brothers.

On October 25, 1945, Nick was inducted into the U.S. Army. He attained the rank of Technician-Fourth Grade while serving with the Army Security Agency at Vint Hill Farms Station in Warrenton, Virginia. Upon his separation on October 31, 1946, Nick returned to Iowa.

On March 15, 1947, Nick was united in marriage with Mary Louise Goochey at the United Methodist Church in Coon Rapids. Three daughters were born to this union. He farmed with his brother Harvey for 20 years, then sold off the livestock so that he and Mary could travel. They were able to tour all over the country by bus, making numerous friends and memories. In 1986, they retired to their home in Coon Rapids.

Nick volunteered, carrying congregational meals, helping with the boulevard project, planted trees with Pete Oliver and he loved visiting his old friends. He enjoyed numerous adventures with his son's and brothers-in-law, to Lee Miller's cabin in Northeast Iowa, deer hunting and trout fishing. Later grandsons were also gladly included.

Nick was a loyal member of Ascension Lutheran Church. He was a tireless worker on the "Dane Crew". Together, these proud men spent endless hours in loving devotion to their church and God. They enjoyed being members of the two-cylinder club and sharing memories of the farm.

Nick took great pride in being a World War II veteran and member of the Dedham American Legion. But above all, he was most proud of his grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

Since 1995, Nick had battled health problems. At the end of February 2011, he became a resident of Thomas Rest Haven in Coon Rapids, Iowa, where he died peacefully on Monday, May 23, 2011.

Russian Ag Delegation visits Whiterock

Creating Great Places of Coon Rapids, lead organizer of the 2009 Khrushchev in Iowa commemoration, continues its program of building ties between Iowa's agricultural leaders and those of the Eastern Bloc. May 13 to 24, CGP hosted a ten-day delegation of Russian-speaking businessmen and farmers from Tajikistan.

This delegation was sponsored by the Open World Program of the US Department of State, and organized by World Services of La Crosse, Wisconsin.

Creating Great Places arranged for the visitors to stay with host families in Ames and Des Moines, and during the week took the group to meet with Iowa Secretary of Agriculture Bill Northey, David Miller of the Iowa Farm Bureau Federation, as well as the staff of Senator Tom Harkin.

The group also visited ISU's Vet Medicine School, Dairy Farm, Poultry Farm and Meat Lab; ISU-Extension; and the Leopold Center for Sustainable Agriculture. They toured the Kalona Cheese Factory and Yoder Goat Farm near Kalona; Hawkeye Breeders Service in Adel; and three family farms near Nevada and Colo. Their trip culminated in a tour of Whiterock and a dinner at the River House, featuring local fresh asparagus grown by Bill Jahn and pies made by Karen Jacobsen.

The Russian agribusiness leaders were from the far-eastern Muslim state of Tajikistan. The main products of this mountainous region are cotton and aluminum exports, but local leaders are also interested in increasing meat production.

Participants in the delegation were the director of Livestock Breeding Institute of Tajik Academy of Agricultural Sciences, the deputy chairman on livestock from the Murodov Production Cooperative, the director of the public National Association of Agriculture Counseling Services of Tajikistan "AgroDonish," and directors of two private enterprises, "Normatova" and "Saidov."

At Whiterock, the guests heard a history talk about the 1959 visit of Nikita Khrushchev, learned about Whiterock's rotational grazing program, and then enjoyed a picnic dinner on the River House lawn. This provided opportunity for them to meet and converse with area agricultural leaders. Speaking through an interpreter, Daryl Olsen, Managing Partner of Audubon's AMVC vet services, Brett Irlmeier, President of Audubon County State Bank, and Lyle Hansen, an Audubon realtor, were able to describe various area advances, including Audubon's new Swine Medicine Education Center. Upon leaving Whiterock, the group stopped by to see the Van Meter Feedlots near Guthrie Center.

School wants to tie attendance to driver's licenses

How best to keep students in school? The Harlan Community Schools is considering a proposal to reduce the number of student drop outs by tying the privilege of having a driver's license to school attendance. Iowa Code requires the school district to "certify that a need exists for the licenses." The Iowa Department of Transportation has the right upon request of a school district to withhold a student's driver's license. Any student under the age of 18 can have their driver's license or learning permit pulled if they drop out of school. It's a policy decision being considered by the Harlan Community School District, which has seen the number of dropouts increase in recent years, including 17 a year ago and 19 so far this year. "That's just a terrible number for us," said associate superintendent Bob Broomfield. "We used to have three or four over a five year period. So, it's an issue." Broomfield said he thinks the possibility of losing one's driver's license is the motivation needed to keep kids in school.

Former manager at West Central took bribes

A former manager for West Central Cooperative allegedly took bribes of more than $230,000 from a Sac County farmer in exchange for substantial discounts on seed corn, soybean seed, chemicals, fertilizer and other cooperative services, according to a lawsuit filed in Story County District Court. The manager, Chad Hartzler, 43, of Story City, allegedly admitted to taking the bribes about two weeks ago amid an independent financial audit of the cooperative's underperforming agronomy division, said Sarah Dorman, a West Central spokeswoman. The lawsuit alleges Hartzler gave "discounts substantially below cost, free product, writeoffs and other patently unreasonable" deals to Bill and Kristi Wollesen, of rural Lake View, in exchange for a total of $232,150 that the couple allegedly paid Hartzler over the course of the past five years. The lawsuit alleges that Hartzler doctored invoices to the Wollesens to disguise the scheme. The Wollesens are also embroiled in a federal lawsuit that claims they fraudulently obtained more than $374,000 worth of farm aid payments from the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Farm Service Agency in 2001, according to federal court documents.

City elects not to privatize garbage collection

For right now, garbage removal in Essex will not be privatized following a decision by members of the Essex City Council. The issue of possibly no longer having city-run garbage collection was initially mentioned at the February council meeting. Essex Mayor Russ Hilker explained the two city employees, Jim Alexander and Todd Franks, have both been injured while collecting trash. On top of that, Hilker said the city's garbage truck is old and will need replaced in the near future, which will be expensive. Couple that with rising gas prices, and Hilker said it only made sense to have the council discuss whether trash service should remain the same or change. "Maybe it's time we turn collection over to a local sanitation service?" remarked Hilker back in February. However, after much discussion by council members, no action was taken on the proposal. Hilker explained although the city only makes approximately $2,500 per year on garbage collection, garbage collection in Essex will stay the same as it has been. However, Hilker did say council members will continue to study the issue and that the issue may be brought up again sometime in the future.

Exira teacher featured in New York Times

Kate Weber, fourth grader teacher at Exira Elementary School was recently featured in an article in the New York Times. The article, part of the Times' Learning Network, was about integrating technology into classrooms, specifically, using social media like Twitter, to communicate in the classroom. The article was published on May 12 and was entitled, "Speaking Up in Class, Silently, Using Social Media," and was written by Trip Gabriel. The story featured comments from Weber, along with teachers from Sioux Center, Purdue University and a high school in Detroit, MI, who all use microblogging platforms to set up what is known as a "backchannel" in their classes. The real-time digital streams allow students to comment, pose questions; either to the teacher, or to one another and most importantly, participate in class. Weber said, "When you set up a backchannel and start a discussion, you get answers from those students who might not raise their hand and participate in a traditional classroom discussion. It really encourages the student to participate and that computer work translates. It spills over into verbal discussions and other classrooms activities."

End of an era

Commencement exercises were held Sunday at Audubon, Exira and Elk Horn Kimballton Schools. Exira's exercises were particularly emotional, not only because the class of 2011 will be the final class to graduate from EHS, but because the class lost one of their own to cancer earlier this year. Senior class member Courtney Peppers presented a rose to Terri Johnson, mother of Tom Johnson who would have graduated on Sunday. Johnson passed away earlier this school year after losing a battle to testicular cancer.

Rippey Post Office may be closed

The United States Postal Service has notified the customers of the Rippey post office of a meeting scheduled for this week to discuss a "possible change in the way the postal service is provided." Jean Susnjari, manager of post office operations in Cedar Rapids, stated the recommended change will not necessarily lead to a formal proposal for closure unless we conclude that it will provide a maximum degree of regular and effective service." The letter further states the Postal Service would like to provide pickup and delivery of the mail and all other customary postal services by rural route emanating from the Grand Junction post office. "It is estimated that carrier service would cost the Postal Service substantially less than maintaining the post office in your community," said a letter written to Rippey residents.

DAYS GONE BY

Here's the first of several photos we're pulling from the 1959 archives. It shows the Coon Rapids city council and the swimming pool association holding a special meeting at the golf course on Saturday, June 19, 1959 to discuss the location of the proposed new Coon Rapids swimming pool. As part of the council's action that day, they proposed a swimming pool east of and parallel to the present parking lot used by the pool and golf course. The council voted to accept the deed of 22 acres of the present golf course from Roswell Garst and locate the proposed pool at the aforementioned site; also buy 41 acres of ground which the golf association purchased from Francis Shirbroun; to agree to lease the ground to the golf association for operation as a golf course, with reservations for a swimming pool, parking lot, town dump and room for an east-west airstrip. We think this photo was taken looking east. One can barely see new Hwy 141 along the right horizon.

100 Years Ago

June 2, 1911

James Peterson, who sold Tom Taylor a team of stolen horses for $275 last Wednesday was captured at Omaha Saturday and taken to Audubon. He had $104 of the $275 left when run down, so that it would seem as though he had lived a pretty fast life for three days. However, he had spent about $75 of it in Coon Rapids before taking the train west. He invested quite heavily in jewelry and wearing apparel. Yet after reaching Omaha he spent money at the rate of about $40 a day, which was a pretty rapid clip for a young man not used to plenty. The neighbors of the man are very much astonished at his course. He had previously a very good reputation. But, as he was drinking while at Coon Rapids, it is probable that booze was mainly responsible for his theft. However, he must have had something of the nature of the thief in him. It is said that when a man is in liquor his most prominent trait is brought out. If he is disposed to be jolly, or quarrelsome this nature is intensified. So Peterson probably was disposed toward shady transactions, and more than likely if his whole past were known it would be found that he has been guilty of other offenses. This one, however, will be a dear experience to him. It will mean a term in the pen. It is believed that Mr. Taylor will recover the money found on Peterson's person.

The meeting called to consider that proposition of a farmers creamery was fairly well attended but no decision was reached.

Fred S. Davis has leased the Opera House and took possession Wednesday. Editor Rickerson did not find a paying business.

Earl Chess, who passed some worthless paper on Patrick & Bump and C.B. Hendricks last week, returned Sunday and promised to make the loss to these men good if they would give him a chance to square the matter with them. On the promise that he would turn over a new leaf they agreed not to prosecute him. The amounts were small and it appears that another boy was implicated in the deals. It is to be hoped that Earl may profit by this experience. A young man can soon redeem himself if he tried and the people come to see that he is in earnest and sincere. Give the boy a chance.

The Wilt & Shirbroun feed mill building has been undergoing considerable change this week.

We have not yet reached the horseless age. And we shall not soon reach it. But gas and electric vehicles are making great progress for general utility purposes. With good roads good enough to be good at practically all seasons of the year- the sphere of the horseless vehicle will be much more widely extended. They will help to solve the rural school problem. They will aid in centralization. The county school with two to five scholars will cease to exist. The central school with its library, athletic field and arrangements for all kinds of social gatherings will become a reality- will be made so by the auto and good roads. Strange old world, this, where the dreams of today become the realities of tomorrow- Nonpareil.

Mrs. Laura Garst has written another book entitled "In the Shadow of the Drum Tower." It deals with missionary work in China coupled with short biographies of friends with whom she has been associated in missionary labors in heathen lands. It is written in a highly entertaining way and cannot fail to delight all who read it. There is much information in it respecting the work and hardships of missionaries. It is sold for only 50 cents a copy.

Meade Steele is to leave for Germany about the middle of July where he will accept a position with his brother-in law in a manufacturing concern. Meade is a first class young man, who has made good with Royer & Co. for a year or more and will no doubt succeed at his new work.

The following special from Sac City respecting the murder of two men, father and son, has special interest at Coon Rapids from the fact that Clifford Wilson, one of the men under arrest, is a grandson of Mrs. Herring and the son of former Postmaster Wilson of Sac City. It is evident that booze is responsible for the crime. James White and his son, Mathew, prominent residents of this city are dead and Clifford Wilson and William White are in jail as the result of a shooting which occurred at the White home early this morning. A posse is searching the country in the hope of finding a stranger who was with Wilson at the time of the shooting and who it is thought had part in the murder. Wilson, the stranger and Will White, son and brother of the murdered men were together last night and it is said were intoxicated. White, while on his way home about midnight with his companions, declared that he had been robbed of $24 and upon reaching his home, ran into the residence calling out that two men were trying to rob the house. His father, James White, stepped into the living room where Wilson and his companion were standing, commanding him to leave. He fell, fatally injured and died a short time afterward. The son, Mathew, then appeared in the room and was shot three times, dying shortly afterward. Will White remained in the adjoining bedroom until Wilson and his companion left. Wilson and William White were arrested and placed in jail, and as soon as possible a posse was formed to search for the unknown man. At noon today, however, he had not been found. James White, the elder of the two murdered men, was more than 80 years of age, and with his wife recently celebrated their fifty-ninth wedding anniversary. Mathew, the son, was 40 years of age.

The Coon Rapids ball club prolonged its winning streak by defeating Jefferson in an interesting game here Sunday 8 to 5. Roberts and Johnson were the battery for the locals and Frize and Arch worked for Jefferson. Coon took an early lead in the second frame and held it to the finish. Rabuck's home run in the 8th with two on was the thrilling play of the game. Arch also got a home run and a triple. Roberts strained a muscle in his hurling arm in the 8th and was relieved by O. Thomas. It is doubtful if Roberts will be able to pitch again this season. Lake City will play the locals here next Sunday.

A Glidden man picked up here Tuesday by local police in an intoxicated condition was given 30 days in the county jail for drunken driving and lost his driver's license. He is reported to have forced several motorists to take to the ditch to avoid collisions. Local officers state they are watching for drunk drivers and intend to enforce the law.

The Coon Rapids school board will discuss the proposal for sharing students made recently by the Bayard Board of Education. According to CR Superintendent Marvin Judkins, Bayard officials have proposed tuitioning their students in grades 9 thru 12 to Coon Rapids. In return, Coon Rapids would send students in grades 7 and 8 to classes in Bayard. The proposal would be for a 3 year period with the understanding that a reorganization special election would be scheduled as soon as possible and that if successful it would supersede the sharing agreement. Discussion will also focus on the sharing of Judkins as superintendent for both schools.

Energy Grass growth test begins near Manning

Denny Kasperbauer, and his son Randy, of rural Manning, are investing one acre of land between two terraces to experiment growing Giant Miscanthus grass. They want to learn if this 10-foot tall Asian grass can be grown in west central Iowa soils and climate, and how it will yield. They are starting an experiment that will last two years and possibly much longer.

Giant Miscanthus grass is a huge biomass producer in many parts of the world, producing from ten to twenty tons of dry matter per acre after it is mature. This is twice as much as our native Switchgrass, which has been the leading grass biomass grass producer to date. Miscanthus is a long term perennial but starts slowly, so it takes at least two years to reach maturity. The first year, there is no biomass harvest at all as the root systems are developing.

The Kasperbauer men hope to produce four tons per acre of dry grass at the end of 2012, and ten tons at the end of 2013. In future years as the roots expand and become deeper; they hope to reach 20 tons per acre. Smaller Illinois test plots have reached 24 tons per acre.

This grass is a sterile hybrid that does not produce seed. It is planted by burying three inch rhizomes in the ground at two inches deep. The grass stems are surrounded by long leaves that drop each fall. Then the bamboos like stalks are harvested.

The tall grass stalks can be utilized in two ways. First, they can be biomass fuel, similar to coal, and burned for electrical energy production. This is its common use in Europe. Second, there is the possibility of converting Miscanthus grasses to ethanol by cellulosic conversion. This process is being studied now with corn cobs at the Poet Biorefinery ethanol plant near Emmetsburg.

Because Giant Miscanthus loses its leaves before fall harvest, that organic matter provides the protective cover plant residue for the fields to prevent erosion. That is very important, as farmers on sloping ground must maintain a given percentage of residue cover to meet their farm conservation plans. It is anticipated that this grass will be likely grown on sloping lands that need perennial grass protection and are less favorable for row crops.

The Kasperbauers have divided their one acre test site into three 30-foot wide strips, each 500 feet long. The first strip has high plant density of 24,000 rhizomes planted per acre. That is roughly six inches apart in the 40 inch spaced rows. The second strip has a medium density

This Miscanthus rhizome is planted less than 2 inches below the surface. The test has three seeding spacing's of 6", 12" and 18" apart in a row. Rows are 40" apart. Plants will take two years to mature.

city rows, they had to work like mad. They admit that this system was fine for one acre, but for larger plantings, a better system is needed. There are commercial planters for rhizomes, of course, but for this test plot, this was adequate.

Even at one acre, this experiment is the largest in size in the state of Iowa for biomass production of Giant Miscanthus. Iowa State University and the Southern Iowa Resource Conservation and Development Inc. have smaller test plots of many different varieties of Miscanthus, but no plot is over 12' by 12'. There are no other test fields in northwest Iowa.

Because of its form and height, giant Miscanthus can produce twice as much biomass as native switchgrass. Giant Miscanthus grass has been growing for 22 years in Denmark and has not spread beyond five feet from its original planting site. This is important to avoid non-native plants that become invasive over time. Because seeds are sterile, only movement of the rhizomes can spread the plant.

Randy Kasperbauer is a 2009 Iowa State University graduate in mechanical engineering. He studied bioenergy methodology as an undergrad. He also currently works with John Deere Company in Des Moines. Denny Kasperbauer lives on the farm and also manages a tiling business.

of 16,000 rhizomes planted 12 inches apart. The final strip has a low density of 8,000 rhizomes planted 18 inches apart. They will study how fast the plant sends out new rhizomes and fills in between plants and also between rows. They planted on May 18 into a row crop field that was soybeans in 2010.

To plant the three-inch long stick-like rhizomes, they fashioned their own planter using an old two-row corn planter from the 1930's. While leaving the soil openers virtually the same, they took off the seed boxes and substituted four-inch PVC drop tubes. They then mounted a table around the tubes to hold the rhizomes, and a bench to hold two people sitting. Finally they installed a packing wheel behind the tubes to pack the soil around the newly planted rhizomes. As the tractor moves through the field, the people riding the planter drop the rhizomes down the tubes. For low density rows, that was fairly easy. For the high den-

The best location for pickup/drop off location

There's more to last week's cutline which accompanied this photo of city and school officials. The men gathered May 18 to discuss options to build a safe and appropriate student drop-off and pickup site for the new early childhood classroom addition. The new addition will be attached to the existing Intermediate School Building visible in the background. In addition to discussion of building pickup/drop-off area on the west side of the new addition, there's also discussion about building a pickup/drop-off area along the south side. To do so, a retaining wall along the sidewalk on North Street and wrapping it around the west side of the new structure would be necessary. This would allow the city to lower the elevation of North Street. "We have to make sure we have an additional lane if we are going to have pick up/drop off on the south side as well since North Street has heavy traffic," said Stoffers. None of these options have been finalized but Stoffers said that the original assumption was that a drop-off/pickup area would be built along the south side and not the west side. Additional thought then raised the possibility of more pickup/drop area along the west side. These options will be discussed in detail next Wednesday in a special board meeting beginning at 6:00 p.m. Stoffers is hoping several city officials attend to give input on how these decisions can be best made.

Boys rim in and out of state tourney

ANITA -- In, then out. Just like the golf ball that rolls across the edge of the cup, the Crusaders rimmed out of the state golf tournament.

Led by senior Schyler Knudsen with an 18 hole score of 80, the CRB boys finished third in the Class 1A district tournament at the Crestwood Hills Golf Course in Anita last Friday.

According to Iowa High School Athletic Association guidelines, the top two teams advance to state, unless one of these teams is the host school and plays their home season matches on the same course used in district play. In that event, the third place team also advances.

Since Adair-Casey uses Crestwood as their home course, local tourney officials announced prior to the start of district play that if Adair-Casey advanced to state, then the third place finisher would also advance. Actually, this was not the case, since CAM of Anita was the host school -- but no one seemed aware of the potential confusion.

When Adair-Casey won the event and CRB edged West Monona for third, tourney officials congratulated the Crusaders for qualifying for state. Forty minutes later a call from the IHSAA tempered the Crusaders' jubilation with news that they would not be advancing to this Friday's Class 1A state golf meet to be held at the Lake Panorama National Golf Course.

the high road without mentioning the tourney faux pas.

"Congratulations to our players on a nice season," said Zanders. "These are excellent young men who have represented their school with the very highest level of character and etiquette. A special thanks to the three seniors -- Schyler, Michael and Zach -- for their outstanding example; we improved this year because of their leadership. Best wishes to each of these young men."

TEAM SCORING: Adair-Casey 323; Coming 335; Coon Rapids-Bayard 341; West Monona 342; Treynor 352; Moravia 359; Pleasantville 364; Grandview Park Baptist 372; Villisca 373

Coon Rapids Family Aquatic Center

We've read about the Iowa Department of Transportation's plans to repair Highway 141 this summer (it sure needs it) and true to their word, the work commenced this week. However, severe thunderstorms and rain chased the workmen from the field Tuesday afternoon and rain Wednesday continues to sideline their efforts. The first crews on the scene were Edwards Construction in Hampton, who were subcontracted to lay drainage tile along the edge of the highway prior to resurface work. The resurfacing project will affect Highway 141 from Coon Rapids east to Highway 4 east of Bagley. Other road work is taking place on Highway 25 in Guthrie County from Highway 141 north to County Road E63.

Lake View to host Stone Pier Summer Concert series

Coon Rapids' Rich Baker plays in "King of the Tramps" in debut performance Friday

LAKE VIEW - Local music lovers are excited about the latest addition to Lake View's seasonal event calendar. The community is turning one of their historic stone piers into a stage for five evenings this summer. These stone piers in Town Bay were built by the Civilian Conservation Corps (CCC) during the Great Depression and completely restored in 1999. Named to the National Register of Historic Places, these landmarks offer a perfect setting for fishing, bird watching, relaxing and now, for hosting live music performances.

Food will be available with proceeds benefiting the concert series and event merchandise will also be available. Guests are encouraged to bring a lawn chair or blanket to listen on land, or listen by boat on beautiful Black Hawk Lake.

The first show of the series on Friday, May 27th, will begin at 6:15 pm. Musicians from the East Sac County High School band will open the entire series, followed by a double bill featuring King Of The Tramps and The Further Adjustments. This will be the debut public performance for King Of The Tramps, an original roots-rock group based out of Auburn. The band was started by guitarist and lead vocalist Todd Partridge, who spent over 10 years creating original music with the western Iowa-based group, Salamagundi. Justin Snyder of Lake View adds lead guitar, Rich Baker of Coon Rapids plays bass and brothers Adam and Ryan Audlehelm round things out on keyboards and drums.

FOR RENT: 1 bedroom, 2 bath, double car garage, AC, reasonable utilities. Call 712-659-3413
